International Protective Security Board Prepares for 2nd Annual Close Protection Conference

The International Protective Security Board (IPSB) will host its 2nd annual Close Protection Conference in Las Vegas from November 30th - December 2. This year the conference will take place at the Westgate Hotel.

The IPSB is an independent, nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization devoted to promoting the protection industry's interests and professionalization. With the intention of elevating protection professionals' standards, opportunities, and industry insights, the IPSB is committed to delivering an unparalleled educational and networking experience for seasoned service providers, new and aspiring EP professionals, as well as representatives of all industry sectors.

Last year's inaugural conference was well received as close to 300 members of the Close Protection industry traveled to Las Vegas. In addition to a number of thematic panels, the Close Protection Conference also featured a keynote address by Mike Howard, the Chief Security Officer at Microsoft.

Building off of last year's success, the IPSB has arranged for a variety of panels, interviews and Q&A sessions to take place. The wide range of topics to be examined at this year's conference include but are not limited to; operational and tactical planning, security related technological advances and the business of close protection. Last year's popular "Tac Talks" segment which had industry-renowned experts providing unique insights on key protection issues is scheduled to make a return.

Participants are encouraged to secure their tickets and accommodation as early as possible in order to take advantage of the existing promotional offers.

Tickets for the 2017 Close Protection Conference can be purchased online at <https://www.eventbrite.com/e/2017-close-protection-conference-tickets-34634820681>
